PMRA Signs Statement on Removal of Federal Statistics

PMRA | Posted on 2/28/2025

At the request of the Council of Professional Associations of Federal Statisticians (COPAFS) and the approval by the PMRA board, PMRA signed the COPAFS statement on executive actions related to government data being removed from federal websites and data portals.

Since the removal of federal data in the US directly affects many of our members' ability to conduct public management research at the heart of the PMRA mission, the board approved this action. The President of PMRA, Rob Christensen, has appointed the faculty Secretariat, Zach Mohr, to form an ad hoc committee on policy statements that will review when it is appropriate for PMRA to sign or issue statements such as this one that are in support of its mission.

International Journal of Public Leadership | Gender and Leadership in Public & Nonprofit Sectors

Special Issue | Posted on 3/7/2025

The International Journal of Public Leadership seeks papers for a 2026 special issue on gender and leadership in public and nonprofit sectors. Gender is a critical societal topic, influencing leadership representation and equity. Women and gender-diverse individuals are making historic strides, exemplified by the recent election of a transgender woman to the U.S. House of Representatives. This issue explores how gender norms shape leadership styles and how women & gender-diverse individuals experience leadership. We invite interdisciplinary submissions from fields like public administration, gender studies, and political science, using diverse research methods to examine gender dynamics in leadership.

Deadline: August 15, 2025 More Information

Public Organization Review | Power, Politics and Public Administration

Special Issue | Posted on 3/7/2025

We are inviting proposals for contributions of articles to a forthcoming special issue of Public Organization Review, focused on Politics, Power, and Public Administration. This issue aims to provide a platform for critical, innovative, and interdisciplinary discussions at the nexus of political theory, the dynamics of power, and the evolving practice of public administration. As political landscapes continue to shift globally, the interplay between politics, power and public administration remains more important than ever. This special issue seeks to explore how power is distributed and exercised within public institutions, the role of political ideologies in shaping administrative processes, and the implications for governance, policy implementation, and democratic accountability.

Deadline: June 16, 2025 More Information

IJPA | Cross-Sector Collaboration Between Government and Civil Society Organizations

Special Issue | Posted on 3/7/2025

The International Journal of Public Administration invites proposals for a special issue on "Cross-Sector Collaboration Between Government and Civil Society Organizations." This special issue invites research that deepens theoretical and empirical insights into the nature, dynamics, and leadership of cross-sector collaboration. We especially welcome contributions that explore variations in these processes across different contexts and examine their implications for public service delivery, network governance, and organizational hybridity. Submissions may include conceptual pieces, comparative analyses, case studies, and qualitative approaches emphasizing the complexities of collaboration between government and CSOs, contributing to theoretical development.
