Special Collections | Asia Pacific Journal of Public Administration

Special Collection  Posted on 7/18/2025

The Asia Pacific Journal of Public Administration maintains several special collections that address pressing issues in contemporary governance and public administration.

 Public Administration in Authoritarian Regimes explores the relationship between political systems and bureaucratic behavior and performance. This collection sheds light on critical questions central to understanding how public administration functions under authoritarian governance.

 Public Service Motivation features scholarship that advances both theoretical and practical perspectives on public service motivation, with a particular emphasis on contextual and regional variation. A core aim is to strengthen non-Western contributions to the literature by leveraging insights from diverse governance settings.

 Digital Transformation in Public Administration examines the evolving role of digital technologies in shaping public sector decision-making and service delivery. With a focus on the Asia Pacific region, this collection investigates the successes, challenges, and institutional shifts associated with digital governance.

Together, these curated article collections offer scholars and practitioners a deepened understanding of key dynamics in public administration across varying political, institutional, and technological contexts.
